

True Potential Defensive Portfolio

Portfolio Objective

The objective of the True Potential Defensive Portfolio is to provide investors with a way to achieve their investment goals. The Portfolio offers full exposure to different manager styles within the Defensive risk profile. We review the Portfolio monthly and, if necessary, rebalance to the allocation of styles that we believe offers the best opportunity for growth within the Defensive risk profile. The Portfolio aims to produce a higher risk-adjusted outcome at a lower average cost, compared to an equally-weighted model of Defensive funds.

Risk Profile: Defensive

The Defensive Investor may be very sensitive to short-term losses. A Defensive Investor's potential aversion to short-term losses could compel them to sell their investment and hold a zero risk investment instead if losses occur. Defensive Investors would possibly accept lower long-term return in exchange for smaller and less frequent changes in portfolio value. Analysing the risk-return choices available, a Defensive Investor is usually willing to accept a lower return in order to assure the safety of his or her investment.

Investment Commentary

The True Potential Defensive Portfolio produced a return of +0.72% for the month of July, net of Portfolio OCF.

Fixed income outperformed equity markets, with longer dated sovereign bonds particularly strong. Within equities, there was a reversal of leadership compared to earlier in the year. US equities, particularly within the information technology and communication services sectors, relatively underperformed. Investors instead looked toward regions and sectors with cheaper valuation levels after the strong returns that have stretched valuation levels in certain sectors and in particular anything artificial intelligence related. Domestic UK equities fared particularly well in this environment, with Japanese equities also producing good returns in GBP terms.

The True Potential 7IM Defensive fund provided the strongest returns against this backdrop, with the fund benefitting from being the largest holder of sovereign bonds within the portfolio. Within equities, the fund having the largest allocation in the UK was also helpful to returns.

Over the month, no changes were made to manager allocations within the Portfolios with the investment team believing positioning was optimal. Although no changes have been made to manager allocations, the True Potential manager cohort have been adjusting positioning. Examples include additions to domestically focussed UK companies as well as to the US equity market. Within fixed income, additions have been made to UK Gilts and also to higher yielding European corporate bonds.
